Portfolio Comments

September saw modest declines in global growth assets. The market continues to be focussed on the words of the Federal Reserve Chairman, Jerome Powell, who, at the Federal Open Market Committee meeting, decided to hold off announcing when the US central bank will reduce its bond purchases or tapering. Although Powell referred to the current economic uncertainties, he did suggest tapering 'may soon be warranted'.

In the UK, the Bank of England said it was starting to see the case for higher interest rates as it increased its forecast for inflation at the end of year to over 4%, which is more than twice the target. The market is now pricing in a likely first interest rate rise, by February next year, although any economic slowdown might hinder this. The impact of the governments job furlough programme finally coming to an end, will be a key consideration in any decision.

Japan bucked the global growth asset trend and was the only major market to make positive ground, and this was on the back of an unpopular Prime Minister Suga, stepping down on the 3rd of September. Elsewhere we saw declines in the US and European markets. Basic materials, Communications and Utilities were sectors that were hardest hit. Energy bucked the trend as Europe braces for a winter energy crunch, amid soaring energy prices.

Over the third quarter, the areas that have given the best returns were from growth and developed market equities. The poorest factor performers included Small-cap and Value. Emerging Markets also underperformed.

Turning to defensive assets, the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate index, decreased by 0.3%. The best returns over the quarter were from the US and Euro High Yield space, with global index-linked the largest detractor.
