Portfolio Comments

July saw volatility return to global markets albeit not to the levels that were seen in March and April. The world has continued to ease lockdown restrictions and global travel started to pick up at the start of the month. As we have moved through July, infection numbers in certain regions have started to increase. In Europe, Spain has seen the greatest increase with the UK government implementing travel restrictions on all but essential travel. The USA has also seen a continued increase in cases in many states, which looks to hamper the reopening of the largest economy. This has translated into higher volatility in markets as the concerns of a second wave increases.

Economic data has shown that the slowdown in the global economy is the fastest since WW2 with US GDP falling 32.9% in the second quarter. Europe also had a large hit to GDP with a 12.1% decline in the Eurozone, with Spain being the hardest hit economy seeing a 18.5% decline.

In equity markets, the US has continued to outperform Europe with the S&P 500 up 5.51% over the month compared to the UK FTSE 100 which was down -3.86%. This was down to large technology stocks continuing to perform strongly with more cyclical sectors underperforming as they have been more affected by the pandemic. Chinese markets rallied in July despite the virus and emerging market currencies rallied on the back of a weaker US$. This helped emerging market equities increase by 2%.

Government bonds continued to perform well as central banks indicated interest rates will stay lower for longer and more central bank stimulus was announced in Europe. The 10 year Gilt Yield fell from 0.2% at the start of July to 0.1% by the end of July, with similar moves seen across global bonds.
