Portfolio Comments

November was a positive period for global equity markets on the back of three major events during the month. It began with the results of the US election, with Joe Biden winning the Presidency and the Republicans holding on to the Senate. This was taken as positive news for global markets with the expectation of more stable international relationships for the US and the possibility of higher corporation taxes being diminished.

The biggest news of the month was the positive vaccine trials from Pfizer, Moderna and AstraZeneca with the possibility of vaccinations starting in December and early January next year. COVID-19 cases continued to rise globally, however the positive news of a vaccine was welcomed by equity markets.

In the UK, the FTSE 100 was up 12.69% in November, which was its best monthly performance since January 1989. The US and European equity markets also rallied strongly on the positive news and were up 7.4% and 16.34% respectively. Value sectors, which had been negatively affected by the pandemic such as Oil and the Travel and Leisure sectors, led the rally.

Turning to defensive assets, with investors taking a more positive view on the future economic outlook, this saw UK 10-year Gilt yields rise from 0.21% to 0.32% as investors moved away from safe haven assets. A similar trend was seen in government bonds across the globe. Corporate bonds however, performed slightly better, with the majority of indexes producing positive returns for the month.
